Trainer

Nicole Wolasz, LCSW-R is a Trauma Institute/Child Institute trainer and has worked with Dr. Ricky Greenwald (developer of Progressive Counting) for the past 25 years.

What is Progressive Counting?

Progressive Counting (PC) is a psychotherapy procedure for resolving trauma or loss memories via memory reconsolidation. The therapist guides the client to imagine a movie of the distressing memory, from beginning to end, while the therapist counts aloud first from 1-10, then 1-20, then 1-30, etc., to a maximum of 100. As the distress level goes down, the movies get shorter. This continues until no memory-related distress remains. PC can be done as a stand-alone treatment or within the context of a comprehensive phase model of trauma-informed treatment. www.childtrauma.com/training/pc/

Why Choose Progressive Counting over EMDR?

- PC is easier to learn, very well tolerated by clients, and appears to be effective and efficient
- PC is for all ages: children, teens and adults
- PC is less expensive!!
- PC is evidence based as per California Evidence based clearing house

Testimonials

"It's an understatement to say how grateful I am to you. The knowledge I've gained through this training has helped me be a better therapist, mother, partner and human being. How I see behavior has changed, as has the lense that I treat my clients. The gift I would give to my clients, if I could, would be to be a better therapist to assist them in their journey. And from this training, I can without a doubt say I am giving them that."

- Cassandra T., 2025

"Progressive Counting with Annie and Nicole was so wonderful; the in depth knowledge and experience they have is evident and allows for everyone to truly immerse themselves in the training. While I was worried initially about doing it all online, it worked out better than I could've hoped. Having additional assistants present to ask questions and provide feedback helps even more with learning. It has been amazing to bring back what has learned to my clients and see how it can be applied to my everyday work; I'd recommend this training to anyone who is looking to expand their therapeutic toolkit."

-Madison T., 2021

Completion of this course allows you to work towards PC certification.
